

CHARLES W. MORSE IS GIVEN FIFTEEN YEARS IN PRISON

Banker and Spectacular Financier is Found Guilty in Federal Court and Must Serve a Prison Term.

Special to The News.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Judge Hough in the United States Circuit Court this morning sentenced Charles W. Morse to fifteen years in prison. A ten days' stay was granted Morse within which to perfect an appeal to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals. His fellow defendant, Alfred Curtis, had his sentence suspended.

New York, Nov. 6.—Charles W. Morse, until a year ago a dominant figure in the world of finance, and Alfred H. Curtis, former president of the National Bank of North America, were found guilty in the criminal branch of the United States circuit court on charges of misapplication of funds and falsifying the books of the bank. There was also the additional charge of conspiracy against the prisoners, but the jury acquitted the men on this count.

Within five minutes of the time the jury had rendered its verdict, Judge Hough refused to entertain a motion for bail and had committed the two bankers to the Tombs prison. The federal statutes provide a minimum penalty of five years' imprisonment for falsifying the books of a bank and a penalty of two years' imprisonment and $5,000 fine, or both, for misapplication of funds. No alternative but imprisonment is provided for conviction on the charge of falsifying the books of the bank. The maximum penalty on this charge is 10 years' imprisonment. The jury recommended clemency for Mr. Curtis, but made no recommendation in the case of Mr. Morse.

The scene in the courtroom was a dramatic one. Mrs. Morse and Mrs. Curtis had remained in the courtroom nearly the entire day, awaiting a verdict. Mrs. Curtis showed signs of giving way to her emotion a number of times, and once when the jury returned to the courtroom to receive instructions on the manner in which the conspiracy charge should be considered, Mrs. Morse broke down and sobbed.

It was evident by the excitement of court attendants some minutes before the jury filed in with a verdict that a decision had been reached, and the news was quickly communicated to the principals in the case. This gave Mr. Morse and Mr. Curtis time to prepare themselves and to speak words of encouragement to their wives.

A large crowd had hurried into the courtroom to hear the verdict. As the doors leading to the jury room were thrown open, silence fell upon the crowd. It could be seen from the solemn faces of the jurors that an important verdict was to be delivered.

Foreman John Elder, responding to the customary question of the court clerk, read the verdict. Mr. Morse and Mr. Curtis stood before the jury while Mr. Elder was reading the verdict.

"We have agreed upon a verdict in the case of both defendants," said the foreman, in a subdued voice. "On the charge of conspiracy we find them not guilty." A look of relief came to the faces of the prisoners, but it only lasted a moment, for Mr. Elder continued: "On the charge of misapplication of the funds of the bank, we find both defendants guilty. On the charge of making false entries in the books of the bank, we find both defendants guilty. In the case of Alfred H. Curtis, the jury wishes to make a strong recommendation to the mercy of the court."

A stifled sob of relief escaped Mrs. Curtis as she heard the recommendation of mercy for her husband. Mr. Curtis took the verdict like a stoic, but Morse was unable to conceal the disappointment he felt, while his wife showed no signs of emotion. She kept her eyes on her husband, seemingly forgetting herself and being concerned only on his account.

JUDGE HARGIS'S WILL FILED AND PROBATED

Entire Property is Left Undivided and Son and Daughter Are Cut Off.

JACKSON, Ky., Nov. 6.—The will of the late Judge Hargis was produced in the Breathitt County Court and duly proved and probated before Judge S. S. Taulbee. The witnesses to the execution of the will are Floyd Day, now administrator of the Hargis estate, and Judge J. J. C. Bach, the attorney who prepared it. The will is dated June 5th, 1906, and, by its provisions, bequeaths all of the property of Judge Hargis of every kind to his widow, Mrs. Luella Hargis. Bach Hargis, the youthful slayer of his father, receives nothing whatever from the Hargis estate. Neither does Mrs. Evelyn Hogg, the only daughter of Judge Hargis. By an order of the County Court Floyd Day was discharged as administrator and all property and funds of the estate turned over to Mrs. Hargis.

ESCAPES DEATH BY A NARROW MARGIN

Ben Quinn, a Painter, is Nearly Run Over By a C. & O. Train.

Ben Quinn, a painter and upholsterer of this city, had a narrow escape from losing a limb at the Union Depot last night. Quinn, it is said, was drinking and had got on the C. & O. train to see a friend who was passing through here, and after the train had started he attempted to get off, and his foot struck a switch, throwing him down.

One of his feet slipped back under the wheel of the moving train and the heel of his shoe as torn off and his heel badly bruised and cut.

Dr. Shirley was summoned and dressed his wound, and no serious results are expected.

KEHOE IS DEFEATED BY 600 PLURALITY

Latest Returns Indicate a Victory For Bryan in State By Eleven Thousand.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 6.—More complete returns from the State indicate that Bryan has carried Kentucky by a plurality approximately 11,000. This is likely to be increased slightly by the official count.

The Republicans have elected their candidates for Congress in the Ninth Tenth and Eleventh Districts. Kehoe Democrat, in the Ninth is defeated by Congressman Bennett by a plurality in excess of 600.

JURY IS DISCHARGED.

The writ of forcible detainer that was sworn out against W. H. Huls, who runs the Court View Hotel, by V. W. Bush, representing W. H. Lohmeyer, of St. Louis, who claims to be the owner of the hotel, was dismissed in Judge Evans' court this afternoon. On motion, the jury was instructed to find a verdict for the defendant.

MARYLAND WILL DIVIDE ITS VOTE

Leaders of Both Parties Claim Victory Will Be Very Small.

New York, Nov. 6.—The membership of the electoral college which will choose the next president of the United States remained in dispute when the official counters in Maryland abandoned their task for the day. According to the best information obtainable, the proportionate numbers of Republican and Democratic electors will be determined by a division of Maryland's eight votes. Half of the city of Baltimore and two of the 23 counties outside of that city are still to be counted, but there is a strong indication that the state's vote will be split. In any event, the margin of victory will be so small that the state is claimed by the leaders of both parties. Though the splitting of a state's electoral vote is unusual, it will be recalled that in 1904 Maryland elected one Republican and seven Democratic electors.

Missouri appears to be safely for Taft, to whom the latest returns give a plurality of 2,371.

Conceding Missouri to Taft, and leaving Maryland to be split between him and Bryan, the figures show 319 Republican electors assured and 156 Democratic.

Latest congressional returns indicate that the next congress will be composed of 216 Republicans and 175 Democrats, a majority for the Republicans of 41.

The returns for the Socialist and Prohibition parties are still far from complete, but indicate that the hopes of the Socialists have not been realized, and that the Prohibitionists, in certain sections where gains have been expected, have been disappointed. The figures for the Independence party vote are also insufficient to give an accurate idea of what the party accomplished.

Outside of the returns, political interest was engaged in the exchange of messages of congratulation and thanks between Mr. Taft and Mr. Bryan; a statement by Mr. Bryan in which he sets forth his determination to continue his work for the good of all in the capacity of a private citizen, and the announcement by Mr. Sherman that it cost him just $2,800 to be elected vice president.

Maryland's Vote Is Divided.

Baltimore, Nov. 6.—The official canvass of Tuesday's vote was begun in Maryland and completed in 21 of the 23 counties outside of Baltimore city. In Baltimore it was but half finished when the board of canvassers suspended its labors. Until this count is completed the result will remain in doubt. In some counties there was a wide difference in the vote on presidential electors on both tickets, which made the situation more complicated. It is generally conceded, however, that Maryland's vote in the electoral college will be split.

CHINA FEELS SHE HAS BEEN SLIGHTED

Wanted the Whole Fleet, Not Squadron.

Peking, Nov. 6.—Although the American squadron has left Amoy, the matter of their presence at the southern port has not been more than mentioned in Peking. Officials are silent, and the impression of general humiliation at the fact that only a squadron came instead of the whole fleet can not be concealed. The meagerness of the reply of the foreign board to Admiral Sperry's message of congratulation on the birthday of the dowager empress also has attracted attention, and it is clear that the throne has been indifferent to the whole affair. There are people also who point to the fact that Amoy has had a severe storm while the weather in the north has been beautiful and clear, as an evidence of the mistake of the authorities in selecting Amoy as a port of call. In short, it is generally realized and declared in Peking that the coming of the squadron and not the main fleet will have an unfavorable effect upon present relations.

LAI TO REST AT OLD HOME

Remains of Mr. D. W. Van Arsdale Are Brought From Georgia.

The remains of Mr. D. W. Van Arsdale, agent for the Hagan engines in the State of Georgia, who committed suicide at Macon, Ga., Tuesday morning were laid to rest at his old home in Harrodsburg Thursday morning.

The cause of Mr. Van Arsdale's rash act is not definitely known, but it is thought that it was due to ill health. Mr. Van Arsdale was in bad health for a few months during the summer and spent a few weeks at his home in this city, where he was under the care of a physician. He returned to Georgia and it is said that he enjoyed perfect health until a day or two before he killed himself.

His oldest son who was working with him in Georgia and occupying the same apartments in a boarding house said that on Tuesday morning his father arose about 5 o'clock and said that he was not feeling good and went to the bath room to get a pitcher of water. Nothing serious was thought of his illness at the time by the son and he went back to sleep. Later on in the morning when he rose he found that his father had not returned and at once went to the bath room to see if his father was there. The door was locked from the inside and on looking over the transom he found his father lying with his face downward dead and a revolver by his side.

He had evidently placed the barrel of it in his mouth as it is said that his mouth was powder burned on the inside. The ball ranged upward and came out the top of his head.

Mr. Van Arsdale belonged to one of the largest and most respected families in Mercer county and has a number of friends who will regret to hear of his tragic end. Mr. Lee Todd, secretary of the Hagan Gas Engine Company, and Mr. Tobin, of the Natural Gas Company, of this city, attended the funeral.

PARIS, Ky., Nov. 6.—The Bourbon Fiscal Court met today in monthly session with Judge Denis Dundon presiding, and the full board of magistrates present.

The amount expended this year on the county's roads will approximate $30,000 and for the past three years a total of nearly $80,000.

Supervisor Redmon says the roads are one hundred per cent better than they were three years ago, and that the work of reconstruction will go on uninterrupted till the entire 300 miles of turnpike will be reconstructed with rolled macadam.

FOUR MINERS ENTOMBED.

Benton, Ill., Nov. 6.—An explosion at the mine of Colonel W. P. Bond, 10 miles west of Benton, wrecked the main shaft, and as a result four shot-firers are entombed. Word has just reached here that the mine of Joseph Leiter of Zeigler, in Franklin county, is on fire.

So terrific was the explosion that a car and pieces of railroad track were hurled from the bottom to the top of the shaft, more than 600 feet, demolishing a steel trolley. It is impossible to reach the firers, and their fate is unknown. A large force of men is trying to clear away the wreckage, but the work is proceeding slowly. Unless the men are reached soon they will suffocate. The names of the entombed miners are George Reed, Patrick Dailey, Perry Stevens and John Holmes.

No workmen are in the Leiter mine at Zeigler, which is burning, but several mules are within. The main and shafts have been plugged in an effort to smother the fire.

Big boom is prophesied in iron and steel.

1—Why do you continue bathing your knees and elbows one at a time, when you can stretch out in a full bath tempered to suit you, and can do so every morning if you wish?

2—Why pump and carry water for your kitchen and laundry work when you can have it at hand for the turning of a faucet?

3—Why take chances on drinking germ-filled cistern water when you can get it from a large reservoir filtered through the best filter plant South of the Ohio River?

4—Why have a dry, dismal-looking yard when you can have it filled with green grass and blooming flowers, and can at the same time get rid of the dust in the street?

5—Why suffer other inconveniences when you can have everything for the comfort and health of your family right in the house?

AN INDIAN HERO.

Prize Story by Fifteen-Year-Old Detroit Boy.

"Hi! hi! hi!" yelled the red-skinned hunters as they came speeding over the sparkling cataract in their ten canoes. Far away in the south were the squaws and old men awaiting the return of these braves with meat to last them in times of famine. The Indians landed a little below the cataract, as night was almost upon them.

A blazing fire was made, and a chunk of venison sizzled over it. After they had eaten they sat around the campfire smoking. They were as silent as the night around them, the hooting of an owl being the only sound that broke the silence. When the fire began to get low and their pipes needed refilling, one by one the red men filed into their tepees to get a few hours' rest.

All slept well but one. That was Taw-ko, a boy on his first hunting trip. The day before he had frightened away a herd of deer through his clumsiness. Makwa, the chief and Taw-ko's father, beat him for it, and even At-kik, his closest friend, looked at him only with scorn. A half hour had passed when, by the dim light of the fire, Taw-ko saw a large rattlesnake glide into his father's tepee. In a second he grabbed a gun, and was running to save Makwa's life. He saw the rattler crawling toward the man's face. His head was already poised to strike. Taw-ko aimed his gun at the snake's head. He knew well that if he missed fire his father's life would not be worth much. Crack! Taw-ko stood there, his nerves pitched to the highest tension, waiting until the smoke cleared away. He then saw a wonderful sight. His father was standing up, looking in amazement at the snake's headless body wriggling at his feet.

Taw-ko was a hero after that. His father praised him much and bought him a gun, a much better one than he had. The proud boy kept the snake's skin and it brought him much luck.

He seemed, in years later, to bear a charmed life, which his tribe declared was caused by his keeping of this skin.—Charles Smart, in Detroit Free Press.

ACROBATIC SKELETON.

How You Can Amuse and Mystify Your Friends.

Which is certain to cause much astonishment if well arranged beforehand. Get a piece of board about the size of a large school slate, and have it painted black. The paint should be what is known as a dead color, without gloss or brightness. Sketch out the figure of a skeleton on a piece of cardboard and arrange it after the manner of a jumping-jack, so that by holding the figure by the head in one hand and pulling a string with the other, the figure will throw up its legs and arms in a most ludicrous manner. Make the connection of the arms and legs with black string and let the pulling string be also black. Then tack the skeleton by the head to the black board. The figure having been cut out must be painted black to match the board. Now to perform: Produce the board, directs the Philadelphia Ledger, show only the side upon which there is nothing. Request that the lights be lowered slightly and take up your position a little way from the audience. With a piece of white chalk make one or two attempts to draw a figure; rub out your work as being unsatisfactory and turn the slate round. The black figure will not be perceived on account of the board being the same color. Rapidly touch the edges of the cardboard figure with chalk, filling up the ribs, etc., at leisure, taking great care that nothing moves while the drawing is progressing. Then manipulate your fingers in front of the drawing and command it to become animated, when, by secretly pulling the string attached to the skeleton with your foot it will, of course, kick up its legs and throw its arms about, to the astonishment of the company. A little soft music from the piano will greatly assist the illusion.

An Amusing Trick.

Law Against Too-Youthful Marriages Most Strictly Enforced in the Republic.

"Not long since, while in San Antonio, Tex., I stopped at a hotel in the parlors of which occurred a very pretty and romantic wedding," said Mr. E. V. Turner of Memphis, Tenn., at the Stafford.

"The principals were a young Mexican of great wealth and high social position and a beautiful young woman of the same nationality. They had traveled over 1,000 miles to get married in the United States, for, owing to the rigid laws of their own land, they were not able to wed at home. The reason was the bride's youthfulness. She was only 17, and in Mexico, unless the fair one's parents and guardians agree no priest dare join in wedlock if the woman be under 21. In the sister republic they punish severely for any infraction of this statute, and hence runaway marriages are of the most unusual occurrence."—Baltimore American.

COLD STORAGE OF EGGS.

A comparative test of the American plan of freezing eggs to preserve them with the method of treating with lime has been made by a scientific French experimenter. The refrigeration process is pronounced hygienically superior. At low temperature, even when continued several months, there is no perceptible change in the taste or properties of an egg, the yolk retains its position instead of falling to the lower end as in lime preservation, and the only change in appearance is a little greater whiteness. It is necessary, however, to keep the temperature about two degrees Fahrenheit below freezing point, with the hygrometer as near 78 degrees as possible.

TO PACK EGGS FOR WINTER.

Egg are expensive in winter and though we pay high prices for "fresh eggs" they are usually "fresh" from cold storage. Here is a method of packing your own:

Get fresh eggs just laid, along about the last of September. Take a four-gallon earthenware jar; put a two-inch layer of salt in the bottom; then stand each egg with small end down in the salt until the bottom is filled. Then keep on filling till jar is full. Do not add any more salt, for it will harden and the eggs will break in getting them out. The salt that is used is only for the foundation.

The duchess of Marlborough is said to have inherited many of her good qualities from her mother, who is really fonder of the simple life than of the round of social duties with which she has always been connected. PROCESS OF MAKING DOLLS

Important Industry That is Conducted in the German Town of Welmar.

Consul Will L. Lowrie of Welmar furnishes the following information concerning the different stages by which dolls are manufactured in that important German city. He says:

Only the assembling of the various parts of the dolls, painting the bodies, arms and legs, and sticking on the wigs is done at the factory. Each figure passes through about 20 hands before it reaches completion, the raw material being taken to the homes of the work people and then returned to the factory. The work is all specialized, and each time a new process takes place in the evolution of a doll it is done by certain employees who are more or less experts. Bodies are made mostly of paper, although kid is also used extensively. They are molded at the homes or stamped out in heavy iron molds at factories devoted entirely to this feature. All sizes of dolls are made, from a few inches in length to more than three feet. The hair is Angora wool from England, which also supplies the rubber (elastics), stretched to keep the arms and legs in place. Styles change each year and the manufacturers must keep in touch with the modes.

ABOUT VEGETABLES.

It is safe to say that it is rather a new discovery that vegetables are endowed with qualities which are transmitted to those who feed upon the kindly fruits of the earth. These qualities are physical, moral and intellectual. If we desire to develop the reasoning powers and to endow the equilibrium of the mind with calmness and concentration we must eat potatoes, but we must at the same time remember that overindulgence in that succulent root may produce apathy and indifference. Carrots produce good temper and are strongly recommended to peevish and bilious people. French beans—the haricot vert of our French friends—lead to day-dreaming and artistic thoughts and sentiments, and no better food for authors and journalists can be found.—Lady's Pictorial.

Prov. xvii, 25—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Copyright, 1908, by American Press Association.]

In the last lesson we left David fleeing from Absalom because of the rebellion, but it was still manifestly true "the Lord preserved David whithersoever he went" (viii, 6, 14). The counsel of Ahithophel, who left David to join Absalom, was as if a man had inquired at the oracle of God, but in answer to David's prayer that God would turn the counsel of Ahithophel into foolishness God saw fit to do it through Hushai, David's friend (xv, 31, 34, 37; xvi, 23; xvii, 14). There is great comfort to a believer in the words of Ps. xxxiii, 10, 11, "The counsel of the Lord standeth forever, the thoughts of his heart to all generations." See also Isa. xiv, 24, and it is our privilege to rest in the assurance of the "all things" of Rom. viii, 28; II Cor. iv, 15, and to take even the cursing of a Shimei (xvi, 5, 12) as permitted by God to show His power in due time and change the curse to a blessing. See the sequel to this event in chapter xix, 16, 20. If we would have perfect rest we must believe firmly that the Lord is roundabout His people, as the mountains, as a hedge, as a fire, and that nothing can possibly come through without His permission, not even the barking of a dog (Ex. xi, 7).

The phrase "David's friend" (xv, 37; xvi, 16) reminds us of Abraham, the friend of God (II Chron. xx, 7; Isa. xli, 8; Jas. ii, 23), and of our Lord's words, "I have called you friends" (John xv, 15). Why not be more worthy of such a royal friend? The friendship of this world is enmity with God, and it is impossible to be a friend of the world and of God too (Jas. iv, 4). The manner of Ahithophel's going out of this world (17, 23) has grown to be the common thing in our day, not hanging, but the taking of his own life, another indication that the return of the King draweth near. Mahanaim, where Shobi and Machir and Barzillai met David and his people with so much kindness, makes us remember the kindness of God to Jacob in some of the dark days and that we, too, have the ministry of angels as well as of visible friends (xvii, 27, 29; Gen. xxxii, 1).

Our lesson chapter opens with the going forth of David's army under Joab, Abishai and Ittai, with the words of David ringing in their ears, "Deal gently for my sake with the young man, even with Absalom" (verse 5). The armies met, and David's followers were victorious. There was a great slaughter of Absalom's followers, and Absalom himself was slain miserably by the hand of Joab and thrown into a pit and covered with a heap of stones (17). His beautiful head of hair was seemingly his ruin (verse 9, chapter xiv, 26). How often it is that what one prizes most becomes the undoing of such a one! Pride of any kind always leads to a fall. David was prevented from going out with the army, the people saying that it would not matter if half of them died, but that David was worth ten thousand of them (verse 3), so he remained in the city and sat between the two gates to wait and watch for tidings, while the watchman went up to the roof over the gate that he might see afar off and advise the king. David hoped for good tidings, but it must have been with a sorrowful heart and some forebodings. The two prominent words in our lesson verses, "watchman" and "tidings," suggest to us many things and give us a whole study in themselves. Because of a well beloved Son given for us, the only begotten Son of God, the angel said to the shepherds, "Behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people" (Luke ii, 10), but the majority of those to whom the good news has come seem not to care whether others hear or not. The lepers outside of Samaria put us to shame, who said in the midst of plenty, while others were perishing, "We do not well; this day is a day of good tidings, and we hold our peace."

A common question asked by those who hear for the first time of the wondrous love of God, as to how long we have known it and why we did not come sooner to tell their friends who have died without hearing, ought to search us to the very heart. Do we believe the cry of the watchman, "The morning cometh, and also the night," and, as we think of Israel's blindness, what about obedience to the command in Isa. xl, 9, margin? Alas, there are many who, like Ahimaaz, the son of Zadok, insist on running, but have no tidings, and therefore their running is in vain. The message is plain, but we must receive it before we can run and tell it. See Hab. ii, 2, "Make it plain that he may run that readeth it," not, as often quoted, that he that run may read, which is not in the Scripture. We see in our lesson the grief of a loving father over the untimely death of a wayward son, and our hearts are touched by the cry of the broken hearted father.

What about the heart of God as He gave up His only Son, the holy one, to become a sacrifice for our sins, a sin bearer, a curse for us? Let each one say "bearing my sins in His own body on the tree." Might he not say to us as He beholds our indifference, "Is it nothing to you all ye that pass by?"

GREATEST EXHIBITION ON TUBERCULOSIS TO BE SHOWN

Will Be Opened in New York on November 15th and Will Have Exhibits
From Fifteen Different Countries.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—By November 15th the greatest exhibition on tuberculosis that has ever been gathered will be opened to the public in New York City. The exhibit, which formed part of the recent International Congress on Tuberculosis, will be shown under the auspices of the Tuberculosis Committee of the Charity Organization Society, and the Department of Health.

The exhibition consists of charts, photographs, maps, models, diagrams and all sorts of paraphernalia that have to do with the prevention, study, or treatment of tuberculosis. Exhibits are shown from 15 different countries, and from 200 associations and individuals. All in all, the exhibition includes nearly 5,000 units. It will take 50,000 square feet of floor space and 110,000 square feet of wall space for the display of the exhibits. Ten special cars and over 1,200 packing cases are required to transport it.

Three Weeks' Stay.

During its three weeks' stay in Washington, this exhibit was viewed by fully 200,000 people. The exhibit of the Charity Organization Society, which forms but one small unit of this entire exhibition, has been viewed by over a half-million people in New York City. From these figures, and a comparison with the attendance of similar exhibitions, it is estimated by the authorities in charge of the present exhibit, that probably over a million people will see this educational display while it is in New York City.

Exhibit is Unique.

The exhibit, at it will be shown in New York City, is unique, not only in the fact that it is the greatest of its kind ever gathered together, but also, because this demonstration, collected for a purely educational purpose, is used to illustrate the dangers of only one disease. The entire exhibition publishes and carries but one message, that consumption can be cured, and that the cure for the disease is fresh air, rest, and wholesome food. These simple facts are emphasized in every conceivable way. Charts and diagrams show the fearful ravages of tuberculosis in various parts of the world. In the German exhibit, a series of small painted wooden pillars and blocks of different heights, demonstrate the comparative mortality from consumption in various groups of the people. The United States Census Bureau shows the deaths from tuberculosis in a unique way, indicating by a flash of electric light that someone is dying from tuberculosis in the United States every two minutes and thirty-six seconds; 23 every hour, and 548 every day.

Treatment of Disease.

Some of the most interesting exhibits are those showing the treatment of tuberculosis. One fact is emphasized, however, in every sanatorium, "shack," or dwelling-house offered as a means of treating consumption, and that is that the patient must have an abundance of fresh air. Every model of buildings shown is designed to give a maximum amount of fresh air to the patient both day and night. Balconies, houses, tents, and groups of buildings of every sort show this phase of the campaign against tuberculosis.

Gospel of Fresh Air.

The numerous means employed to spread the gospel of fresh air, rest and wholesome food" are shown in pamphlets, books, photographs, and small exhibits. Hundreds of tons of literature are being prepared for free distribution at the coming exhibition. Everyone who attends will be able to receive information on any side of the tuberculosis problem in any of the American or European languages. Among the individual exhibits, which will be shown in New York are eight, which recently received from the International Congress on Tuberculosis, prizes ranging in value from $1,000 to $100. Besides these, 44 of the exhibits to be shown were recipients of gold medals, and 43 of silver ones.

The exhibition will remain in New York City for one month. At the end of that time, it will be broken up into several units, the various States, countries, and individuals who have contributed to it, taking their respective parts with them. It is probable, however, that part of the exhibition will be shown in several other large cities of the country.

TORTOISE SHELL.

The Way the Plates are Removed From the Animal.

The comb of tortoise shell has a very pale and translucent yellow, the only really valuable kind of shell.

"Many people think this pale, unmottled shell the cheaper kind," the dealer said. "Do you know why? Because the imitations are all made like this."

"That is one vulgar error about shell. Another is that the tortoise is killed to get its shell casing. That is as absurd an error as it would be to say a sheep was killed to get its wool."

"What is done is this: The fishermen, having caught a tortoise, tie him and then cover his back with dry grass and leaves. They set fire to this stuff. It burns slowly, and the heat causes the thirteen plates of the shell to loosen at the joints. With a knife the plates are pried off, and afterward the tortoise is set free. The base, or roof, of his shell is intact and will grow again. If tortoises were killed to get their shell they would long since have become extinct."

"No, no. Every tortoise is, as it were, a farm—a shell farm. Fishermen catch him regularly and with heat and a knife gently remove his shell."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

COLORS IN THE OCEAN.

Various Causes For the Different Tints of the Water.

Sky and cloud colors are often reflected in the sea, but just as the air has its sunset glory so water has its changing tints quite apart from mere reflection.

Olive and brown lines in the waves off the coast come from the muddy sediment washed from the shore, as blues arise chiefly from reflected sky. But there are many other colors in the ocean. On almost every long voyage at sea spots of reddish brown color are noticed at one time or another. When a few drops of the discolored water are examined under a microscope myriads of minute cylinder shaped algae are seen, some separate, some joined together in scores. It is this organism—sometimes called "sea sawdust"—which has given the name to the Red sea, although it also abounds in other waters. Sometimes the water far from land will be seen to be of a chocolate hue for an extent of several miles, and this is caused by millions upon millions of minute one celled animals which lash themselves along, each on his erratic individual course, by means of the finest of hair-like threads of cilia.—Pearson's.

Accomplished.

"She's got a future."
"Can she act?"
"No, but she can work her eyes better than any lady in the business, and as for wearing swell clothes—gee, she couldn't do better if she was twins!"—Life.

PROUD OF THE RESULT.

There is one result of the election with which all good citizens whether they be Republicans or Democrats, can be satisfied. Governor Patterson, of Tennessee, has been re-elected.

On the very eve of the election when he heard of the dreadful murder of Rankin at Reelfoot Lake by night riders, he cancelled all of his political engagements and his speaking dates, and left his campaign to take care of itself. His duty called him to aid in the arrest of these midnight assassins. This was to him a far more important task than the pursuit of his political ambition. And the result showed that his course instead of losing him his race, helped to return him to the gubernatorial seat.

The good citizens of every State are infinitely in the majority. At times, they, through indifference, allow men of criminal instincts to pursue this work unchallenged and unpunished. But these indifferent citizens finally wake up and when they do, they make short work of such criminals.

The night riding crimes could never have made head in Kentucky and Tennessee and elsewhere unless they had been tacitly winked at by so-called good citizens. In no county of this State would they have gone unpunished but for the silent support of a certain element of the population. The murder of Hedges still cries aloud for vengeance in the rich and intelligent county of Harrison.

And when the tally is finally taken, when the law-abiding citizen finally rouses himself, then woe betide the office holder who has failed to do his duty. And these midnight cowards, who under the cover of darkness, and by reason of their numbers, dare to commit these dreadful crimes, will "flee from the wrath to come."

We lose patience sometimes. We have our faith in the perpetuity of our institution sorely tried when we read of the dastardly shooting of Hedges, the hanging of Rankin, the murder of a mother and the babe at her breast, the killing of four negroes at Russellville because it was reported they sympathized with a negro criminal. And when we recall the whipping of American citizens, the burning of barns and houses, the destruction of corn and wheat and tobacco, we cannot understand the supineness of our people.

But such things cannot last. Some day, Kentucky will be in a blaze of resentment against these marauders. And when that time comes, nothing will prevent their punishment or extermination.

POLITICAL NEWS ITEMS.

We have heard some criticism by gentlemen of both political parties on the political news items that we publish. Several Democrats have found fault with certain telegrams because they seemed to favor the Republican party. On the other hand, we have had Republicans take exception to the Democratic leanings of certain items.

We get our telegraphic news from the American Press Association a non-partisan company.

This organization sends the same news to Democratic and Republican papers. It is like the Associated Press and the United Press Association. It gives the facts as they are. No great organization of this kind could exist and sell news to papers of all shades of political opinion unless it was absolutely without political bias of any kind.

The News receives its bulletins over the Postal Telegraph Company's wires up to two o'clock each day. It uses them as it gets them. It does not color them in any way.

If the news is objected to because it is favorable to one party or the other it is the fault of the news itself, not ours.

As an example of our care in handling a political news item we will cite a single instance. On election night we, of course, wanted to give the results of the race in the Tenth Congressional District in Wednesday morning's extra edition. What purported to be the majorities in the various counties of the district came to us during the evening, from both Democratic and Republican politicians. We accepted neither. The News spent considerable money that night in getting as near the correct results as possible. On the morning after the election, our figures showed that Langley had carried the district by about 1,500 votes. To-day, the fuller reports show that Langley actually received a majority of over 2,000.

On Tuesday night, the Courier-Journal, of Louisville, a Democratic newspaper, called up the office of The News by long distance telephone and asked for the majorities in the Tenth District. On the same evening, The Lexington Leader, a Republican newspaper, asked the same question over the same long distance line. And both papers used the information given by The News. Each knew that the information was furnished without bias or political coloring and was as nearly correct as our facilities made possible.

In this connection we desire to make a plain statement. We do not expect to please the politicians of either party. But a small percentage of those who read the paper are interested in politics further than to get the news. This we propose to give. We appreciate the liberal patronage that we are getting from all classes of our citizens. With this liberal patronage continued, we expect to make a paper of which every citizen will be proud, and the time will come, we are confident, when even the politicians will see that the course we are pursuing is the best possible.

Tailors Who Hedge

YOU are not hard to fit. You have been told that you are, but the real trouble lay in the fact that your tailor did not know how to fit you. He was hedging, so that if your clothes did fit you, he could properly impress you with his skill; and if they did not, he could have a soft place to fall on.

We do not deny that there are scores of capable and trustworthey tailors in America who turn out satisfactory clothes. But the chances are that you have not found one of them. If you have we congratulate you and pass on. If you have not we say this to you:

You can be properly fitted in Stein Bloch ready-to-wear clothes. They will give you style and personality. When you try them on you see yourself the best expression of the season's fashion as manifested in the acknowledged centers of style at home and abroad. The expense you are put to is surprisingly small when reckoned in the light of what you receive.

SOCIETY

An Amateur Play.

The people of the town are once more showing their interest in Kentucky Wesleyan College. This time it is the young people. They are now engaged in preparing an amateur play to be staged at the Opera House about Thanksgiving.

The play itself, "The Merchant of Venice, Modernized," will prove to be a fitting vehicle in which the young people may display their peculiar talent. The story is based upon a football team and its success. A very charming love story is intermingled to lend variety. In the play we will see our old favorites, Bassanio, Antonio, Gratiano, Shylock, Portia, Nerissa and others but in an entirely new dress. The entire play will be barbaled.

A very efficient staff and cast has been secured, thus securing in advance its success.

The cast is as follows:

Duke of Venice Mr. Patterson
Antonio Prof. Moore
Bassanio Lewis Hampton
Gratiano Prof. Lewis
Shylock Prof. Dalgety
Lubal Chas. Strother
Launcelot Gobbo Hunter Fosketi
The Professor Jim Phillips
Policeman Hoines
Portia Miss Alice Porter
Nerissa Miss Emma Lee Taylor
Jesseca Miss Katherine Nelson
Polly Miss Merry Reese
Mrs. Gobbs Mr. Cropper
Miss Abbie Thredyee
Antonio's mother
Miss Pauline Peeples
Football Teams, etc.

Mr. Jeff Stewart is handling the business end and Prof. Moore will be stage and property manager. The play will be coached by Prof. Dalgety.

Two complete football teams will be seen in actual play, making one of the most realistic scenes ever attempted on the local stage. Interest will be maintained throughout both by the natural strength of the production and by the localizing of the scene and character representations. A number of first class specialties will be introduced between the acts so that there will be no room for one dull moment from the rise of the curtain to its final drop.

OPERA HOUSE.

"The Barber of Seville" will be presented at the Winchester Opera House, Saturday, November 7, matinee and night by the John Dunsmore Opera Company.

John Dunsmore, who is the proprietor and manager of the John Dunsmore Opera Company, as well as the singing comedian of the organization, was for a number of seasons a leading and valued member of the famous "Bostonians."

Mme. Monti Baldini, prima donna of the company, won her first great success in the role of Carmen at the La Scala, Milan, where she was the leading soprano of the notable organization at that famous opera.

Rossini is said to have written the music of "The Barber of Seville" in fourteen days, and considering the beauty and merit of the composition, what hope have the ready made music composers of the present day?

Four hundred nights in New York and six hundred in Paris is the record of "The Barber of Seville." The John Dunsmore Opera Company, is the first to produce Rossini's masterpiece in English.

Those who remember "The Bostonians" in Robt. Hood have pleasant recollections of the Will Seale of John Dunsmore who is reviving the glories of the once famous organization at the head of his company.

The Younger Set

By ROBERT W. CHAMBERS,
Author of "The Fighting Chance," Etc.

Copyright, 1907, by Robert W. Chambers

"Yes—indeed, yes! And, Phil, she—I don't know how to say it—but she—when she spoke of—of you—begged me to try to be like you. And it is a lie what people say about her—what gossip says, I know. I have known her so well—and I was like other men—charmed and fascinated by her, but the women of that set are a pack of cats, and the men—well, none of them ever ventured to say anything to me! And that is all, Philip. I was horribly in debt to Neergard. Then Ruthven turned on me—and on her, and I borrowed more from Neergard and went to her bank and deposited it to the credit of her account, but she doesn't know it was from me. She supposes Jack Ruthven did it out of ordinary decency, for she said so to me. And that is how matters stand. Neergard is ugly and grows more threatening about those loans, and I haven't any money, and Mrs. Ruthven will require more very soon."

"Is that all?" demanded Selwyn sharply.

"Yes, all. I know I have behaved shamefully."

"I've seen," observed Selwyn in a dry, hard voice, "worse behavior than yours. Have you a pencil, Gerald? Get a sheet of paper from that desk. Now, write out a list of the loans made you by Neergard—every cent, if you please—and the exact amount you placed to Mrs. Ruthven's credit. Have you written that? Let me see it."

The boy handed him the paper. He studied it without the slightest change of expression, knowing all the while what it meant to him, knowing that this burden must be assumed by himself, because Austin would never assume it. But the thought of the cost sent a shiver over him and left his careworn face gray.

After a moment he turned to Gerald, a smile on his colorless face, and said:

"It will be all right, my boy. You are not to worry. Do you understand me? Go to bed now. You need the sleep. Go to bed, I tell you. I'll stand by you. You must begin all over again, Gerald, and so must I—and so must I."

Chapter 22

SELWYN had gone to New York with Gerald "for a few days," as he expressed it, but it was now the first week in October, and he had not yet returned to Silverside.

A brief note to Nina thanking her for having had him at Silverside and speaking vaguely of some business matters which might detain him indefinitely; a brief note to Eileen regretting his inability to return for the present, were all the communications they had from him except news brought by Austin, who came down from town every Friday.

A long letter to him from Nina still remained unanswered. Austin had seen him only once in town. Lansing, now back in New York, wrote a postscript in a letter to Drina, asking for Selwyn's new address, the first intimation anybody had that he had given up his lodgings on Lexington avenue.

Eileen had not written him. His sudden leave taking nearly a month ago had so astounded her that she could not believe he meant to be gone more than a day or two. Then came his note, written at the Patrons' club, very brief, curiously stilted and formal, with a strange tone of finality through it, as though he were taking perfunctory leave of people who had come temporarily into his life and as though the chances were agreeably even of his ever seeing them again.

The girl was not hurt as yet; she remained merely confused, incredulous, unreconciled.

It was possible now to ride cross country, and Nina, who was always in terror of an added ounce to her perfect figure, rode every day with Eileen, and Austin, on a big hunter, joined them two days in the week.

There were dances, too, and Nina went to some of them. So did Eileen, who had created a furore among the younger brothers and undergraduates, and the girl was busy enough with sailing and motoring and dashing through the sound in all sorts of power boats.

Truly, for her, the world was still green, the sun bright, the high sky blue, but she had not forgotten that the earth had been greener, the sun brighter, the azure above her more splendid—once upon a time—like the first phrase of a tale that is told. And if she were at a time listless, absent eyed, subdued, a trifle graver or unusually silent, seeking the still paths of the garden as though in need of youthful meditation and the quiet of the sunset hour, she never doubted that that tale would be retold for her again. Only, alas, the fair days were passing, and the russet rustle of October sounded already among the curling leaves in the garden, and he had been away a long time, a very long time, and she could not understand.

On one of Austin's week end visits, the hour for conjugal confab having arrived between husband and wife, he said, with a trace of irritation in his voice:

"I don't know where Phil is or what he's about. I'm wondering—he's got the Selwyn conscience, you know—what he's up to and if it's any kind of damfoolishness. Haven't you heard a word from him, Nina?"

Nina, in her pretty night attire, had emerged from her dressing room, locked out Kit-Ki and her maid and had curled up in a big, soft armchair, cradling her bare ankles in her hand.

"I haven't heard from him," she said. "Rosamund saw him in Washington—passed him on the street. He was looking horribly thin and worn. She wrote. He did not see her."

"Now, what in the name of common sense is he doing in Washington?" exclaimed Austin wrathfully. "Probably breaking his heart because nobody cares to examine his chaotic life. By the way, Nina, Gerald has done rather an unexpected thing. I saw him last night. He came to the house and told me that he had just severed his connection with Julius Neergard's company."

"I'm glad of it!" exclaimed Nina. "I'm glad he showed the good sense to do it!"

"Well, yes. As a matter of fact, Neergard is going to be a very rich man some day, and Gerald might have— But I am not displeased. What appeals to me is the spectacle of the boy acting with conviction on his own initiative. Of course he can, if he chooses, begin everything again and come in with me, or, if I am satisfied that he has any ability, he can set up some sort of real estate office on his own hook."

Nina hesitated, another idea intruding.

"Austin, the Orchil boy, the one in Harvard, proposed to Eileen, the little idiot! She told me. Thank goodness, she still does tell me things! Also the younger and chubbier Draymore youth has offered himself after a killing proper interview with me. I thought it might amuse you to hear of it."

"It might amuse me more if Eileen would get busy and bring Philip into camp," observed her husband.

"Do you know," said Nina, "that I believe he is in love with her?"

"Then why doesn't it?"

"I don't know. I was sure—I am sure now—that the girl cares more for him than for anybody. And yet—and yet I don't believe she is actually in love with him."

After a moment Nina's face grew grave, and she bent forward.

"Alix is ill. Nobody seems to know what the matter is. Nobody has seen her. But she's at Clifton, with a couple of nurses, and Rosamund heard rumors that she is very ill indeed. People go to Clifton for shattered nerves, you know. There is mental trouble in her family. You have heard of it as well as I. You know her father died of it."

"The usual defense in criminal cases," observed Austin, flicking his cigarette end into the grate. "I'm sorry, dear, that Alix has the jumps. Hope she'll get over 'em. But, as for pretending I've any use for her, I can't and don't and won't. She spoiled life for the best man I know. She kicked his reputation into a cocked hat, and he, with his chivalrous Selwyn conscience, let her do it. I did like her once. I don't like her now, and that's natural, and it winds up the matter."

Ruthven was at that very moment seated in a private card room at the Stuyvesant club with Sanxon Orchil, George Fane and Bradley Harmon, and the game had been bridge, as usual, and had gone very heavily against him.

Several things had gone against Mr. Ruthven recently. For one thing, he was beginning to realize that he had made a vast mistake in mixing himself up in any transactions with Neergard.

When he, at Neergard's cynical suggestion, had consented to exploit his own club—the Slowth—and had consented to resign from it to do so, he had every reason to believe that Neergard meant either to mulct them heavily or buy them out. In either case, having been useful to Neergard, his profits from the transaction would have been considerable.

But even while he was absorbed in figuring them up—and he needed the money, as usual—Neergard coolly informed him of his election to the club, and Ruthven, thunderstruck, began to perceive the depth of the underground mole tunnels which Neergard had dug to undermine and capture the stronghold which had now surrendered to him.

Rage made him ill for a week, but there was nothing to do about it. He had been treacherous to his club and to his own caste, and Neergard knew it, and knew perfectly well that Ruthven dared not protest, dared not even whimper.

Then Neergard began to use Ruthven when he needed him, and he began to permit himself to win at cards in Ruthven's house, a thing he had not dared to do before. He also permitted himself more ease and freedom in that house, a sort of intimacy, even a certain jocularity.

Meanwhile Neergard had almost finished with Gerald. He had only one further use for him, and as his social success became more pronounced with the people he had crowded in among, he became bolder and more insolent, no longer at pains to mole tunnel toward the object desired, no longer overcareful about his mask. And one day he asked the boy very plainly why he had never invited him to meet his sister. And he got an answer that he never forgot.

Ruthven had viewed with indifference Gerald's boyish devotion to his wife, which was even too open and naïve to be of interest to those who witnessed it. But he had not counted on Neergard's sudden hatred of Gerald, and the first token of that hatred fell upon the boy like a thunderbolt when Neergard whispered to Ruthven one night at the Stuyvesant club and Ruthven, exasperated, had gone straight home, to find his wife in tears and the boy clumsily attempting to comfort her, both her hands in his.

"Perhaps," said Ruthven coldly, "you have some plausible explanation for this sort of thing. If you haven't, you'd better trump up one together, and I'll send you my attorney to hear it. In that event," he added, "you'd better leave your joint address when you find a more convenient house than mine."

As a matter of fact, he had really meant nothing more than the threat and the insult, the situation permitting him a heavier hold upon his wife and a new grip on Gerald in case he ever needed him, but threat and insult were very real to the boy, and he knocked Mr. Ruthven flat on his back, the one thing required to change that gentleman's pretense to deadly earnest.

Ruthven scrambled to his feet. Gerald did it again, and after that Mr. Ruthven prudently remained prone during the delivery of a terse but concise opinion of him expressed by Gerald.

After Gerald had gone Ruthven opened first one eye, then the other, then his mouth and finally sat up, and his wife, who had been curiously observing him, smiled.

She dropped her folded hands into her lap, gazing coolly at him, but there was a glitter in her eyes which arrested his first step toward her.

"I think," she said, "that you mean my ruin. My mind has become curiously clear during the last year—strangely and unusually limpid and precise. Why, my poor friend, every plot of yours and of your friends, every underhand attempt to discredit and injure me, has been perfectly apparent to me. You supposed that my headaches, my outbursts of anger, my wretched nights, passed in tears, and the long, long days spent kneeling in the ashes of dead memories, all these you supposed had weakened, perhaps unsettled, my mind. You lie if you deny it, for you have had doctors watching me for months. You didn't know I was aware of it, did you? But I was, and I am. And you told them that my father died of—of brain trouble, you coward! What a credulous fool you are," she said, "to build your hopes of a separation on any possible mental disability of mine!"

He stood a moment without answering, then quietly seated himself. The suspicious glimmer in his faded eyes had become the concentration of a curiosity almost apprehensive.

"Go on," he said. "What else?"

"For the remainder of the spring and summer," she said, "I shall make my plans regardless of you. I shall not go to Newport. You are at liberty to use the house there as you choose. And, as for this incident with Gerald, you had better not pursue it any further. Do you understand?"

He nodded, dropping his hands into his coat pockets.

"Now you may go," she said coolly.

He went, not, however, to his room, but straight to the house of the fashionable physician who ministered to wealth with an unctious and success that had permitted him in summer time to occupy his own villa at Newport and dispense further ministrations when requested.

On the night of the conjugal conference between Nina Gerard and her husband and almost at the same hour Jack Ruthven, hard hit in the card room of the Stuyvesant club, sat huddled over the table, figuring up what sort of checks he was to draw to the credit of George Fane and Sanxon Orchil.

And now as he sat there, pencil in hand, adding up the score cards he remembered that he was to interview his attorney that evening at his own house, a late appointment, but necessary to insure the presence of one or two physicians at a consultation to definitely decide what course of action might be taken to rid himself of the wife who had proved useless and almost ruinous to him.

He had not laid eyes on his wife that summer, but for the first time he had really had her watched during her absence. What she lived on, how she managed, he had not the least idea and less concern. All he knew was that he had contributed nothing, and he was quite certain that her balance at her own bank had been nonexistent for months. In the autumn he had heard of her conduct at Hitherwood House, and a week later, to his astonishment, he learned of her serious illness and that she had been taken to Clifton. It was the only satisfactory news he had had of her in months.

JUDICIAL PRIMARY IS TO BE HELD SATURDAY.

Judges Fryer and Osborne Will Contest For the Nomination.

CARLISLE, Ky., Nov. 3.—Now that the general election is over the Democrats of Nicholas county and the four counties of the Eighteenth Judicial District have turned their attention to the race for the Democratic nomination for Circuit Judge between Judge L. P. Fryer, of Cynthia, the present incumbent, and former Circuit Judge James J. Osborne, also of Cynthia, which will be decided at the primary election to be held in the district Saturday, November 7.

Both candidates for the nomination are making an aggressive fight and thoroughly canvassing the district. Each candidate has issued a letter which has been sent out to the Democratic voters of the district advancing their respective claims for the support of the Democracy. A close finish is expected and the result cannot be predicted with any degree of certainty.

ITALIANS DEMANDING TRUTH FROM ABRUZZI.

Want Duke to Confirm or Deny Report of Marriage of Miss Elkins.

ROME, Nov. 3.—The Tribuna, which is a government organ, in an article on the marriage of the Duke of the Abruzzi, says that the majority of Italians, while preferring that the Duke should marry a royal princess, do not deny that he should follow the dictates of his own heart, but they demand that the question of his marriage to Miss Elkins be officially confirmed or denied, thus putting an end to the fusillade of the American newspapers, which deeply wounds the Italian sensibilities and may result in a reaction in public opinion.

MATHEWSON WANTS A RAISE.

Says He Will Get More Money or Quit the Giants.

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—Christy Mathewson, star pitcher of the Giants, is the first ball player to make the annual threat to quit the diamond unless he gets a bigger salary than he drew the past season. It is said that the figures in Matty's new contract must be double those in the old or he won't sign it and will pitch life insurance policies all next summer instead of baseballs.

It is said that Mathewson's stipend for the six months of work every summer is $4,000, and that in addition he pulled down a dandy little bonus. But Matty says he sure worked for it. According to the statements he will use to defend his demand for a raise, Christy did practically all the work for the Giants, and it was his clever hurling that kept the New York gang in the float all summer. Having done the work of three men makes him think his salary should be commensurate.

Some of his friends kidded him by saying he should have won the final game from the Cubs to warrant his request for the raise, but he replied that the Giants wouldn't have been in the final game had it not been for his work throughout the season.

The New York Club maintains a discreet and dignified silence on the subject. Betting is that Matty will get the raise. It is said he would have had it anyway, whether he asked it or not.

Head of Harvard University Gives Up His Place.

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 3.—President Charles W. Elliott, for more than thirty years the head of Harvard University, tendered his resignation October 26, to take effect May 19, 1909, according to an announcement made today by the Harvard Board of Overseers. The resignation has been accepted.

Charles William Elliott was born in Boston in 1834, and was graduated by Harvard University in 1853. He at once became tutor at Harvard and was advanced steadily until his election to the presidency in 1868.

THE SWORDFISH.

Overlord of the Sea and the Daintiest
Feeder That Swims.

The swordfish is the overlord of the sea. Neither the whale, the shark nor any other giant of the deep can conquer him in private fight or public brawl. Nevertheless he is peaceful in the main and seeks the simple life, amusing himself often with worldwide travel and always with delicate gustatory joys. He is the daintiest feeder that swims, always kills his own game and thereby insures its freshness, wherefore his flesh is a delight to the palate of mankind and, wherefore, again, men go forth to kill him for market and thereby at times fall upon adventures that make the hunting of tigers and the shooting of grizzlies pale into pastimes for the weary weakling.

For the bold swordfish is still hunted in mode as primitive as that the Eskimo uses to kill the stupid whale, and often the sting of the barpoon changes this luxurious ocean gastronomic into a raging water devil, quick to perceive his advantage, charging with the speed of a bullet and the accuracy of a swordsman up against the lone fisherman in the dory who tries to bring him to gaff. Then must the fisherman measure with exactness the lunge of the monster, avoid it by a marvel of side-stepping in a plunging dory, or he will be spitted like a lark. —William Inglis in Harper's Weekly.

CHANCES IN GAMBLING.

The Rule of the Unexpected at the Tables in Monte Carlo.

There are systems, some will say, that will defeat the bank at Monte Carlo. I have not found one. Two factors settle all systems. One is the bank's limit, which prevents the doubling system so often advocated; the second, the extraordinary idiosyncrasies of chance. Red or black will often run in long series. I saw fifteen reds come up in succession on one occasion, seventeen uneven numbers in an unbroken series on another. One evening on a losing day I was playing on the first six numbers and persistently for some hours the last twelve numbers invariably turned up. Once I saw 21 come up four times in succession when mathematically it should have taken 144 coups to make it show that number of times, and still more strange that on this occasion each time it came up a gentleman had staked the limit on the number—namely, 180 francs—winning in ten minutes something over 24,000 francs. One readily sees by these instances the unexpected very often happens—in fact, more often than that not—Arthur Hewitt in Bohemian Magazine.

The Hog.

No other animal has been more modified by civilization and none reverts more quickly to the original wild type than the hog. Three generations of running wild suffice to turn the smooth, round, short snouted razor-back or hazel splitter thin, lank, leggy, lop eared, snarling snout, an Ishmael in bristles, running like a deer, if running be possible, fighting as only a wild hog can fight when battle is imperative. The tusks, which have been half obliterated in the process of civilization, get back size and strength. At a year old they are formidable, at two murderous, at three or five more deadly than a sword. They afford a certain index of age up to six years, but are commonly broken in fights long before that time. Wild boars are very ill tempered and when worsted in fighting often revenge themselves by ripping the bark from trees as high as they can reach.

Her Exercise.

Many readers think insufficient exercise is responsible for worrying moods. "Dare I whisper it," writes one correspondent. "Though I am a married woman, with two bonnie bairns, when my worries and temper prove too much for me I shut myself up in my room and dance a wild Scotch reel. I always did it when I got in a temper as a child as a sort of vent to my feelings, and I do it still and probably shall continue to do so as long as I'm sufficiently energetic."

Certainly a Scotch reel ought to provide enough exercise to exorcise any demon of worry if lack of exercise is the cause of it.—Home Chat.

A Bad Quarrel.

"Well?"

"Is your climate changeable?" asked the stranger.
"Not very," answered Farmer Corn-tassel. "It keeps shiftin' around a little till it strikes a kind of weather nobody likes; then it sticks."—Washington Star.

What do we live for if not to make life less difficult to each other?—George Elliot.

MAGIC GLASS.

A Curious Mirror That May Be Made Transparent.

One of the most curious inventions of this age is what is called platized glass. A piece of glass is coated with an exceedingly thin layer of a liquid charged with platinum and then raised to a red heat. The platinum becomes united to the glass in such a way as to form an odd kind of mirror.

The glass has not really lost its transparency, and yet if one places it against a wall and looks at it he sees his image as in an ordinary looking glass. But when light is allowed to come through the glass from the other side, as when it is placed in a window, it appears perfectly transparent, like ordinary glass.

By constructing a window of platized glass one could stand close behind the panes in an unilluminated room and behold clearly everything going on outside, while passersby looking at the window would behold only a fine mirror or set of mirrors in which their own figures would be reflected while the person inside remained invisible.

In France various tricks have been contrived with the aid of this glass. In one a person, seeing what appears to be an ordinary mirror, approaches it to gaze upon himself. A sudden change in the mechanism sends light through the glass from the back, whereupon it instantly becomes transparent, and the startled spectator finds himself confronted by some grotesque figure that had been hidden behind the magic glass.—New York Tribune.

SPEED LAWS OF 1816.

Coaches Going Nine Miles an Hour
Frightened the English.

The entry of a growing number in England against the excessive speed of motor cars leads interest to the following passage from the Annual Register for 1816:

A new coach was started in the spring to run to Brighton, a distance of fifty-two miles, in six hours. . . . This, however, became alarming, particularly in the populous neighborhood of Newington, through which it passed, and the parish officers there caused information to be laid against the drivers for driving furiously on the public road so as to endanger the lives of his majesty's subjects.

The result of this is to be read in Mansard's "Parliamentary Reports," June 10, 1816.

The attorney general moved for leave to bring in a bill the object of which was the protection of the lives and limbs of his majesty's subjects by correcting the enormous abuses of stagecoach drivers. Within these few days it would be hardly credible what a number of applications he had received on this subject.

Some accounts were enough to freeze one with horror. A gentleman of the variety had informed him that on Tuesday, May 21, at 5:30, the Trafalgar and Regulator coaches set off from Manchester and got to Liverpool at 8:20, doing this journey in two hours fifty minutes, at the rate of twelve miles an hour.—New York Sun.

Fiji Islanders' Sugar Cane Dance.

A very curious and exceedingly clever dance may be witnessed in Fiji called by the natives "the sugar cane meke," or sugar cane dance. It represents the growth of the sugar cane. In the first figure the dancers squat low on the ground, shake their heads, shut their eyes and murmur slowly and softly an unintelligible sentence. Gradually they all stand up together, growing taller and taller, and as they "grow" they wave their arms and tremble all over from ankle to head, like the tall, tasseled cane waving in the wind, and still they keep on chanting louder and louder. The last figure represents a series of combats meant to symbolize the exertions of the chiefs, who compel the "kalsi," willing and unwilling, to come and cut their crops.—London Standard.

Ambulance Field Examination.

Scene—Hamilton South Haugh; soldier supposed to have been wounded is brought to surgeon's tent by bearers. Bearer (reporting)—Severe scalp wound, sir, accompanied with insensibility. Surgeon—Well, what have you done? Bearer—Dressed the wound, sir, and gave him a little whisky and water. Surgeon—Whisky and water! How did you expect an insensible man to swallow that? Bearer—He axed for't, sir.—London Illustrated Bits.

SHAKE WAS FOND OF SQUABS

Revolver Shot Probably Saved Colony of Pigeons from Complete Annihilation.

A blacksnake fully six feet long and nearly two inches in diameter which had been capturing young pigeons on the rocks just above the Birmingham station of the Panhandle railroad has attracted much attention.

Employees at the station and watchmen at the mouth of the Mount Washington street car tunnel have seen the serpent several times, but none has been bold enough to attempt to capture it. More than a score of pigeons have nests on the rocks and the snake is said to have gone down the hillside from the grass and shrubbery to secure a frequent meal of the squabs.

Capt. C. E. Kemp of the police force of the Panhandle railroad was at the station recently. The snake was perched on a rock in full view. Capt. Kemp fired at the serpent with his revolver. The snake fell from the rock and rolled down the hillside to the rocks above the tunnel. Four or five men climbed the rocks, but owing to the difficult scaling the snake could not be secured.—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

PLAYTHING OF A PRESIDENT.

When President Fallieres arrived in Stockholm, after being welcomed by King Haakon, he presented Prince Olaf with a gift which was received with great enthusiasm. It was a miniature electric railway with a model of the Gare du Nord in Paris.

The line is 25 yards long, with points, signal-boxes and bridges. The train is complete, with a dining car and sleeping car with dolls in the berths. The train runs on a carpet, with a background showing Dunkirk harbor.

During his stay at Reval the president evened matters by presenting the czarowitz with a similar gift.

ACCIDENTALLY BE- CAME SMOKER.

How Gen. Grant Happened to Be Addicted to the Use of the Weed.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 6.—Major
Gen. Fred D. Grant, who is presiding at the court martial now in session at Fort Wayne, in the western suburbs of this city, said to some friends here that the cigar that induced him to the late President
U. S. Grant, into the tobacco smoking habit really figured quite strongly in the winning of the battle at Fort Donelson. Speaking of this incident,
Gen. Grant said:

"My father was in conference with Admiral Foote on the latter's flagship and had just accepted a cigar from the Admiral, when word came to him that the left flank of his force was being repulsed. Hurrying soldiers ashore and galloping on a fleet horse to the battlefield, he succeeded in rallying his forces so completely that chaos was turned into victory. Gen.
Buckner had to comply with my father's demand for an unconditional surrender.

"The newspapers took up the fact that father had rushed from the warship to the battlefield without taking Admiral Foote's cigar from his mouth. The dispatches from the front told how father had come onto the battlefield 'cool and collected and peacefully smoking a long black cigar.'"

"People who read the story began sending congratulations and presents of cigars. Tens of thousands of cigars came, and my father smoked many of them. It made a confirmed smoker of him. But he did not smoke as many cigars as people imagined he did. Sometimes one cigar that he would frequently re-light would last him from breakfast to luncheon. It was the fact that he almost constantly held a cigar between his fingers that made people describe him as a great smoker."

Gen. Grant said that his father tried to acquire the smoking habit at West Point just because the rules forbade smoking. His attempts at smoking while he was a cadet, however, made him very sick and when he left West Point he practically gave them up. During the Mexican War, Gen. Grant said, his father took a liking to the Mexican cigars and found that they agreed with him, but when he returned to the North he again dropped the habit of smoking, to resume it after the Fort Donelson incident.

FIRE DRILL PREVENTS PANIC.

Children March in Orderly Manner
From Burning School.

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—The discipline of the fire drill prevented a panic among 150 school children yesterday, when fire attacked the branch school at Lunt avenue and North Robey street. The building is a frame structure, two stories high.

At the sound of the alarm, the teachers marshaled the children in line, and they made their escape quickly and in good order, despite the fact that the blaze was at the front of the building, the ordinary exit, and egress had to be taken through the rear. The building was saved before any considerable damage had been done.
